The Notorious "Monk" Gets the Full Jail Penalty Which Is Presoribed by Law for Assault in the First Degree.

SAYS HE WILL BE GOOD WHEN IT ENDS.

"I Got Started Wrong and Got in Too Deep." He Declares. and Then He Gives Advice that is Really of Value.

"Monk" Eastman was sentenced by order Goff to serve ten years in Sing to-day-the maximum penalty for the crime of which he was convicted, assault in the first degree. With perfect conduct he may be recased in six years and six months.

"It's all off." said Monk philosophically, as he started for prison this afternoon. "I was in wrong from the start and this is me finish. When I come out I'm going to leave New York and live a decent life out in the country

"I was in wrong from a kid. I was an ordinary kind of an east side boy and I got in with a gang. Then I got and I got in with a gang. Then I got an ambition to be leader of the gang and I fought my way to the top. I was always leader up to the last time I was pinched, but I had to fight for it. "Me stomach is all shot away. I'm held together by bandages. It will be a long turn in the hospital for me when I get to Sing Sing and maybe I'll never come out on me own feet, but if I do it will be the lesson of me life. He's Made Leaders.

'It's better to be on the level. I've done a lot of favors for big men in this town and they've helped me a lot, but this time I'm in too deep. Maybe they can come to the front later on, but I'm no squealer and I'd croak before I'd give up on anybody. Why last election day when I knew the cops would get me if I showed me face, I made me headquarters on the roof of a tall tensment and run me gang from there. I've made district leaders in my time.

When the "Monk" was arraigned for sentence to day it was apparent from his appearance that he knew he had reached his "finish," but he was prepared to take his medicine gamely. His lawyer, George W. Huribut, of the firm of Cantwell & Moore, made a pica for

He Made No Complaint.

"The defendant desires me to say a few words in his behalf," said Mr. Hurlbut. "He wants it understood that he had no complaint about the verdict. Evidently the jury did not believe his witnesses and under the circumstances he does not see how he could have been found otherwise than guitty.

"I have advised him to submit to the verdict of the court and begin immediately to serve whatever sentence may be imposed. It will be a lesson to him in that it will probably make of him a useful estigen. This trial has reached his heart and he sees the error of his ways."

Victim Found Unconscious.

Lents had a big silver watch in his hand and is alleged to have replied:

"I have done a good job. Keep it quiet. I am going away for three or four days and will see you then and make it all right with you. Get that fellow up in my room out in the morning and get him away from here."

Roland grabbed Lentz and told him Roland grabbed Lentz and told him Roland. "The defendant is not well. His health has been undermined by the life he has led and I do not believe he would live out the full sentence. I ask some mercy for him from the Court and wish to say that I don't think he is quite as bad as his reputation."

Recorder Goff was not affected by the plea for mercy. He said that the interests of the community demanded that Monk Eastman be sent away for as long a term as the law could infilt. "I cannot take into consideration the interests of the defendant," said the fellow up in my room out in the morning and get him away from here."

Roland grabbed Lentz and told him he would have to go upstairs with him. Lentz tried to get away, but Roland was the stronger and forced him to go up to the room on the third floor, where they found the stranger lying on the bed in a semi-conscious condition. As they drew near the bed Roland says Lentz tossed the silver watch down beside the stranger and made a bolt for the door. Roland followed.

Lentz ran up Elsventh street to Beake's alley, through this to Tweifth street, and thence to Second avenue, where he dashed down the steps of a tenement house and tried to hide. Roland grabbed him again and they began to fight as Roland tried to drag him back to the house on Elsventh street.

As they drew near the house on but sentiment remained consistently but sentiment remained consistently "I cannot take into consideration the interests of the defendant," said the Recorder.

The sentence imposed upon Monk Eastman to-day interrupts the criminal career of the most notorious gang leader of New York, a man whose mysterious pull with the police and the courts for many years has been little short of smasing. His gang was ready for anything from craps to murder, and it has long been an lopen secret punishment for revenge, but unable to attend to it personally, either because of cowardice or physical inability, could hire competent malmers and suggers through Monk Eastman.

It remained for two Pinkerton detectives, Bryan and Rogers, to accomplish the snuffing out of Monk Eastman—temposarily at least. They were trailing the young son of a wealthy man one night when he was assaulted near Sixth avenue and Forty-second street by Eastman and other members of the gang. Bryan and Rogers jumped in to protect the youth they had been shadowing and Eastman fired a revolver at them. Then ensued a running revolver fight such as Eastman and insean frequently participated in down on the east side, winding up with the capture of the Monk by a policeman at Forty-second street and Broadway.

Inspector McClusky and the District-Attorney bent all their energies toward sending Eastman up the river for a long stay. He had been in so much through the town to his assistance. The case against him was plain and when the jury found a verdict of guilty, the "Monk" threw up his hands and remarked:

"This is me finish." him back to the house on Eleventh street.

As they drew near the house on Eleventh street Policeman Unger and another patrolumn appeared and arrested them both for fighting. They were taken to the East Fifth street station, where Roland told his story to Sergeant Kelly.

Bergeant Kelly at once sent two policemen to investigate and they found Bubrowsky lying in a dased condition on the bed in Lentz's room. He was taken to the station in a patrol wagon, where he revived sufficiently to tell his name.

He said he had met two men on Third avenue who had invited him to drink with them. They took him to the room where he was found and gave him two glasses of wine. He said one of them had put something in the wine.

He gave his name, and said he had been a miner at Everett, Minn., and was on his way home to Europe. He had had $75 on his person and a ticket to Europe. The wallet in which he carried the money was gone.

An ambulance was summoned from the New York Hospital, and Dr. Bailey responded. Bubrowsky was in a bad way, and while the physician, sessisted by several polleemen, was working over him in the back room of the station he died.

The police immediately went over the whole ground, according to the story told by Roland, and in front of the house at Twelfth street and Second avenue, where Lentz had tried to hide they found a small vial containing heroin tablets, a mixture of chloral and morphine, commonly used as knockout drops. The tablets dissolve at once when dropped in liquid.
